TRICARE Makes Allowable Charges Easy to Find

The cost of medical care varies across the country, and neither hospitals nor doctors' offices usually post their charges for various procedures. That makes it hard for patients to judge if they're being charged a reasonable amount for operations or examinations. By making its maximum allowable charges easily available to the public, TRICARE's intent is to level the playing field a little between medical service providers and users.

For a Founding Father, he doesn't know much about helping a kid get a student loan.

Not everyone in the government knows everything about the government. So when you need official info about Social Security, getting a student loan, renewing a driver's license, or if you're just checking your local weather, go to FirstGov.gov. A monumental source of useful information.

FIRSTGOV.gov

AMERICA SUPPORTS YOU

FOR MILITARY MEN & WOMEN

The new Web site shows the TRICARE Maximum Allowable Charge tables, listing the most frequently used procedures, more than 300 of them, and the amount TRICARE is legally allowed to pay for them. These charges are tied to Medicare allowable charges, effectively making them a federal standard for health care costs. TRICARE figures the allowable charge from all professional (non-institutional) providers' bills nationwide, with adjustments for specific localities, over the previous year. A claims processor can tell a provider the allowable charge amount for specific services or procedures and now, anyone can see the charges on the new Web site. The TRICARE allowable charges are listed on line at: www.tricare.osd.mil/allowablecharges
